

Rewrite the following sentences by turning the underlined nominalization into a verb. (You may need to add subjects (characters such as I, we, they, etc.) to the sentences.)

1. The agency conducted an investigation into the matter.
2. There is no need for our further study of this problem.
3. The intention of the committee is to audit the records.
4. There was first a review of the evolution of the dorsal fin.
5. Their increase in revenues was a result of their expansion of outlets.
6. There is a need for an analysis of the intensity of library use to provide a reliable base for the projection of needed new resources.

Rewrite the following sentences by optionally changing the passive verbs (in bold) into active verbs, and optionally changing the active verbs (in italics) into passive verbs. (Passive verbs can be identified by the [to be] + [past participle] form--the first part of this sentence begins with a passive verb.)

1. Independence is gained by those on welfare when skills are taught that the marketplace values.
2. In this article, it is argued that the Vietnam War was fought to extend influence in Southeast Asia and was not ended until it was made clear that the United States could not defeat North Vietnam unless atomic weapons were used.

To rewrite the following sentences begin by unpack the compound nouns ([noun] + [noun] + ...) into prepositional phrases and edit by placing characters in subjects and actions in verbs. (You may need to invent characters such as I, we, they, etc.)

1. Enforcement of guidelines for new automobile tire durability must be a Federal Trade Commission responsibility.
2. This paper is an investigation into information processing behavior involved in computer human cognition simulation.