Executive Committees Of Emeriti and Senate To Meet February 17

The Executive Committees of the Emeriti Association and the University's Academic Senate will meet at 2 p.m. on February 17 to discuss matters of mutual interest and concern.

This joint session, inaugurated last year at the request of the Emeriti Association, is intended to maintain a continuing channel of communication on matters of academic concern between retired and active faculty.

The Emeriti Association also holds meetings at unspecified intervals with University President James Rosser. The most recent meeting was in October. Much of the discussion focused upon ways in which the emeriti faculty could become involved in academic affairs. The President talked about the University's efforts to improve advisory services as a means of improving student retention, efforts to attract larger numbers of promising high school graduates, improvement in the academic honors programs, and greater emphasis upon developing close ties with the communities served by the University, as a "means by which a campus like ours can simulate a residential campus."

President Optimistic Concerning Future Of the University

President James Rosser told the Cal State L.A. faculty in a "State of the University" address in December that there are six reasons for optimism about the future of the University. His list:

(1) We have an excellent faculty.
(2) Projected increase of college-age students in our area.
(3) Increase in our fall enrollment.
(4) No costly payback this year to the State.
(5) New systems of resource management.
(6) Improved relationships with the communities surrounding us, along with increased exposure in the media.

The President stated that, despite the prospects of funding reductions at both the federal and state levels, "Cal State L.A. is in a positive, progressive mode."

He reported that the enrollment of 22,180 students this fall represented the first enrollment increase since 1977 and only the third since 1970. There was a corresponding increase in FTE and in the average credit load. This achievement of enrollment objectives means that the University will not have to return budgeted funds to the State. He praised the faculty and staff for their efforts in bringing about the enrollment turn-around.

Expanding upon his comments on the quality of the faculty, the President cited their record of attracting over six million dollars for research, training, and public service projects. He also praised their accomplishments in writing books and articles, presenting papers at professional meetings, and other contributions in their professional fields.

He expressed appreciation for the

Forbes Named to Head Nominating Committee For 82-83 Officers

Immediate Past President Robert Forbes has been named by President Thompson and the Executive Committee to head the Nominating Committee for this year.

Serving on the Nominating Committee with Forbes will be Jane Matson and Mike Grisafe.

Offices for which nominees must be selected are Vice President/President Elect, Secretary (two-year term), Senator, and two positions as Members-at-Large of the Executive Committee.

Nominations will be reported in the March issue of Emeritimes, with the election to take place at the annual business meeting in April.

Mann Named Secretary

George E. Mann, recently retired Professor of Engineering who resides in South Pasadena, has been appointed by President Alice Thompson to replace Keith Gummere as Secretary of the Emeriti Association.

Executive Committee Meeting in President’s Conference Room

The Executive Committee of the Emeriti Association has moved its monthly meetings to the Conference Room on the 8th floor of the Administration Building, at the invitation of President James Rosser.

Meeting are held on the second Tuesday of each month at 10:30 a.m. All members of the Association are welcome to attend.

Playnight Goers Enjoy Performance of "Grease"

It was a smash hit again, as 52 persons (emeriti, spouses and friends) gathered at Cal State L.A. for the third Emeriti Association “Playnight” on November 20.

Those forming the largest group ever to participate in an Association activity drank and dined sumptuously at the University Club and then enjoyed the opening night performance of the musical “Grease”, staged by the Theatre Arts Department under the direction of Maris Ubans.

Much of the success of the event must be attributed to Professor Walter Beaver, who provided sufficient tickets for the unexpectedly large group and presented his usual inimitable pre-show commentary. As has been the case for previous “Playnights”, the after-show comments fell under the heading of “It was great! Let’s do it again.”

Those out-of-towners attending included Bev and Bernie Warner from Cambria Pines, and Mary Huber from Palm Springs.

Others attending, most of them accompanied by their spouses, were Curtis Coons, Burton Henry, Bernice Smith, Jack Heppe, Donald Kinstler, Ake Sandler, Jane Matson, George Mann, John Greenlee, Amy Brainard and Fred Shroyer.

Also, Pete Olsen, Morton Renshaw, Joseph Stubbins, Celeste Griffith, Bob Forbes, Bill Lloyd, Jerry Hutto, Don Mortensen, John Bushman, Ed Nelson, Dan Bilowsky, George Francis, Sid Albert, and Walt Beaver.

Helping with arrangements were Joe Grisafe (for his father, Mike, who was birdwatching in New Zealand), Bob Forbes, Mary Huber, and Bernice Smith.

Association Committee Studying Plans for Retirement Services

An ad hoc Retirement Services Committee headed by Clifford Dobson is exploring ways in which the Emeriti Association can become involved in providing programs and services that will assist faculty in pre-retirement planning and post-retirement counseling.

Chairman Dobson reported on the initial planning efforts of the committee at the January meeting of the Executive Committee. Following discussion of the project, the Executive Committee voted to extend an invitation to the University’s Director of Personnel, David Riles, to meet with the Executive Committee in February to develop plans for the Emeriti Association and the University to engage jointly in providing programs and services for retiring and retired faculty.

Serving on the committee with Dobson are Sidney Albert, Helen Zimmaviev and Mike Grisafe.

faculty’s support of the University’s efforts in carrying out its affirmative action commitments, and gave credit to the faculty for assuming responsibility in maintaining quality programs of instruction.

Looking somewhat toward the future, the President discussed the need to add new academic programs, and develop “a high-quality program of General Education.” He emphasized the “increasing importance of enrollment management,” involving the recruitment and retention of quality students, with emphasis upon academic advisement, learning assistance and career counseling components, an outreach program, more and better information materials, and bona fide honors programs. He expressed concern about the “very serious problem” of attrition and urged faculty assistance in correcting it.

He talked about improving the quality of student life, and such related matters as child care facilities, parking, student housing, and the addition of new academic facilities and equipment.

In his concluding remarks, President Rosser stated that “Cal State L.A. is clearly a dynamic institution with a future as bright as we are willing to make it.”

Albert Reports on Annual Conference Of Continued Learning Organizations

Sidney Albert, a member of the Emeriti Association executive committee, represented Cal State L.A. at the second annual Conference of Continued Learning Organizations held in December at Cal State Fullerton.

Upon receiving his report, Dean of Continuing Education Roger Dash expressed interest in exploring the possibility of establishing a continued learning organization at Cal State L.A. Emeriti who would like to participate in the launching of such a program are invited to send a note to Sid Albert. See Emeriti Directory for his address.

Highlights of Albert's report were as follows:

"Continued Learning Organizations are self-governing associations of retirees, affiliated with a university through its Extension or Continuing Education office, and offering an independent program of courses for themselves and, in some cases, for adult members of the community.

"The conference was designed as a means of sharing ideas and experiences, in order to improve already successful programs. It ended with a proposal for, and initial steps toward, confederation, along with efforts to propagate the movement on other interested campuses.

"The principal participating organizations of the conference were the Institute for Continued Learning, U.C. San Diego; Continued Learning Experience, Cal State Fullerton; San Diego Educational Growth Opportunities, San Diego State; and the Plato Society, UCLA. Other participants were the Center for Learning in Retirement at UC Berkeley, Pacific Oaks College, and the California Council on Gerontology and Geriatrics.

"Representatives of the four principal participants presented panel discussions on programming, membership, finance and public relations. During the course of the discussions, members of these organizations reported on their program offerings and modes of operation."

The entire conference was tape-recorded and a copy has been obtained by the University's Office of Continuing Education. The tapes, along with brochures and newsletters distributed at the conference, provide descriptions of the programs being conducted at the four principal participating institutions.
