2. Chair Prabhu reported a response from Tosha Pham, Chief Information Officer/Associate Vice President, ITS to a concern raised by Senator Hanan on November 19, 2019:

Concern: In KH, there is an issue with the computer labs. They fall asleep and then you can’t turn the computers back on. When I spoke with technology about this, they said that this is happening university-wide. Today, for 20 minutes, I tried to get the instructor monitor on – doesn’t work. This isn’t one classroom where they fall asleep at night and then when you try to turn them on in the morning, it’s a problem. It impairs instruction because you can’t use the overhead; you can’t do anything.

Response: I have an update regarding the question raised at Senate meeting. Looks like this is currently a recent bug from Microsoft and we have informed all of the ITCs and posted signs to inform faculty what to do when they see a black screen or no activities at all. Unfortunately, KH D1043 is the only one with the missing sign. Someone must have removed it, and it is back now. Sleep mode is not enabled in the labs, so it must be the random black screen issue the faculty encountered. ITCs are aware of the random startup/black screen issue, how to fix it, and most of them showed their faculty what to do, so faculty can contact their college ITCs if they need assistance. Jeff Cheam and his team are also available and we can provide assistance if need be. Our ITS Help Desk is also aware of the issue and they can provide instructions. Currently, this is a high ticket with Microsoft so they are working on finding a solution since it affects all campuses using Microsoft. For now, these are the instructions that we have posted in the electronic classrooms:

Instruction posted - the temporary solution is to hold down the power button until the computer powers off. Restart the computer by pressing the power button again, and the computer will turn on normally. Please let me know if you need further clarification.

2.2 Chair Prabhu reported a response from Karin Elliott-Brown, AVP and Dean of Graduate Studies, to a concern raised by faculty member Silvia Heubach:

Concern: During some discussion, it was brought up that the Graduate Studies Center is not open in the evening. We have many graduate students who work and come to campus for late afternoon or evening classes, when the center is closed. Is any consideration given to having the center open 1 - 2 days later than the current closing time?

Response: Thank you for sharing the concern. The Office of Graduate Studies closes at 6 pm most nights. However, we do offer extended hours for services to graduate students in the graduate commons area. Our writing consultants are available until 8pm three nights a week (Mon., Wed., Thurs.) and thesis reviewers adjust their schedule to accommodate the needs of all students. Thesis reviewers also provide consultation through email and phone when students can’t come to campus. Andrew, the Graduate Student Center Coordinator, holds workshops in the evenings to accommodate night students and we have videos of our thesis submission workshop on our website. Please let the faculty know that I will gladly address specific concerns or needs as they come up; but I do not have the office staff to remain open beyond 8am-6pm. I must say that students have been pleased with the extended hours offered by writing consultants.
