Cal State Los Angeles prepares for two new leaders

By James Figueroa, Staff Writer

twitter.com/@sgvn

Updated: 12/01/2012 06:19:08 PM PST

Outgoing chancellor: Charles Reed faced controversy, challenges

Reed’s impact: Cal State San Bernardino | Cal Poly Pomona | Cal State Long Beach | Cal State Northridge | Cal State Dominguez Hills | Cal State Los Angeles | Cal State Fullerton

Incoming chancellor: Tim White unafraid of challenges ahead

LOS ANGELES - Take a look at the Cal State Los Angeles campus today, and it’s easy to see big changes since 1998, when Charles Reed became chancellor of the Cal State system.

A series of construction projects in the past decade have transformed the campus, right down to the circular welcome center in the middle of the main entryway.

CSULA is on the verge of even bigger changes in its leadership - not only because of Reed’s departure, but because President James Rosser plans to retire by the end of the school year, after 33 years.

Administrators and teachers credit Rosser with keeping the university afloat through the difficult economic downturn, while Reed has been targeted more often in student protests on campus.

Rosser declined to return calls seeking comment.

"We know that the job of being chancellor is really a difficult one," said Melina Abdullah, president of the California Faculty Association’s Los Angeles chapter. "We always expected the chancellor to advocate for a public system of higher education. Most have been disappointed."

Vaidya said the mood on campus has vastly improved with the passage of Proposition 30, which staved off drastic cuts at CSULA.

"I don't know if we would have been able to call ourselves a university," she added.

The six colleges at CSULA do have some top-notch programs, and gained traction in recent years with the addition of doctorate programs in education and nursing, said Ashish Vaidya, the CSULA provost and vice president of academic affairs.

Construction of a new green energy center is also on the horizon.

Vaidya is particularly happy that CSULA ranked sixth in this year’s national universities ranking by Washington Monthly.

"We're well-positioned for whoever is the next president," he said. "That person will find a very engaged campus, great students right in the middle of one of the great global cities in the world."

The recession created some difficulties for students who found fewer class options, but the university responded by tailoring its programs for more precise coursework and improving student advisement, Vaidya said.

"Our focused attention is making sure we improve our retention and graduation rates," he said.

james.figueroa@sgvn.com

626-657-0987
Recommended for You

- Coast Guard member dies in crash off Calif...
- Teen accused of DUI following chase from Covina...
- Citrus Walk mixed-use project expected to...
- Overturned big rig blocks eastbound 10 Freeway...
- High School Football: Monrovia, Rio Hondo Prep...
- Officials rescue dog that fell 150-feet over...

-- SPONSORED LINK --
Air Berlin to Lay Out Overhaul (From DailyMe.com)

Latest Videos

HIDDEN GEMS-CHRISTMAS HOUSES

Sky Zone in Covina

From: SGV/News
Views: 0

Time: 05:16

Sky Zone in Covina

From: SGV/News
Views: 172

Time: 02:55

More in News & Politics

Find:

in: San Gabriel Valley

Tap In LA
Know more. Enjoy more.

Find:

in: San Gabriel Valley

Dining | Ads/coupons | Claim Your Listing

Click here to enjoy the San Gabriel Valley News home delivery!

- Readers: Let us know what you think of the new commenting system

Add a comment...

Posting as Golden Eagle (Change)

Facebook social plugin