

Tracy Webb is currently the Director of Communication & Law Enforcement Outreach for the United States Attorney's Office in Los Angeles. Prior to this role, she was Counsel for Child Abuse Policy and Cyber Crime Prosecution at the Los Angeles City Attorney's Office. She is a career prosecutor who has spent the majority of her 38-year career prosecuting crimes against children and family violence cases including domestic violence, physical, sexual, exploitation, and sex trafficking cases and technologically facilitated crimes against children. Tracy was an active member of the Federal Internet Crimes against Children (ICAC) Task Force for nine years and is currently co-chair of the Los Angeles County Cyber Crime Task Force, a position she has held for the past 14 years.

Tracy is an adjunct professor at Cal State LA and was formerly an Assistant Professor at her alma mater, USC. She is also an LAPD Board of Rights Hearing Examiner for the Los Angeles Police Commission and a Terrorism Liaison Officer for the Joint Regional Intelligence Center (JRIC). Tracy has published numerous works including an article on "Children Exposed to Violence: A Developmental Trauma Informed Approach for the Criminal Justice System" in the Journal of Child & Adolescent Trauma, a Law Review article for Chapman University School of Law on the "Investigation and Prosecution of Technology Facilitated Crimes" and a feature article in the California Peace Officers Association magazine on "The Brave New World of Cyber Crime Prosecution."

Tracy is a frequent speaker locally and nationally in the area of cybercrime, child abuse, human trafficking and online exploitation. Her keynotes, presentations, classes and workshops are renowned for their generous mix of knowledge, humor, and the reality of the world of technology and exploitation. Tracy has dedicated her career to prosecuting criminals, supporting children and families, and educating law enforcement, students and the community. She currently teaches Cyber and Technology-Facilitated Crime, Ethics, Leadership and the Senior Capstone courses.